HEAVY GUARD IS ON GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS EVERYWHERE

NEW TRIAL IS ASKED TODAY; STAY DENIED

Governor Then Asked to Delay Execution of Two Radicals.

Boston, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Counsel of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti today filed in the Norfolk county superior court at Dedham, a motion for a new trial for the two men and petitioned Governor Fuller for a stay of execution.

The petition to the Governor set forth that the defense also had filed a petition for a habeas corpus in the Suffolk County Superior Court.

A. D. Hill, chief counsel for the defense, conferred with Justice E. T. Broadhurst of the superior court today and upon leaving said that Justice Broadhurst had refused to act on his request that a stay of execution be granted by that court and that some justice other than Judge Webster Thayer be assigned to hear the motion for a new trial.

Charges Prejudice.

The petition for a new trial alleges prejudice by Judge Thayer. It also asserts that new evidence has been found that holes in Sacco's cap which Judge Thayer had said were impervious were made by Chief of Police Gallivan of Braintree. A third ground is the allegation that W. H. Proctor, a state fire arms expert, had changed his testimony.

The petition to the Governor asks for a stay "for a reasonable time," permitting motions for a new trial.

Attorney Muzmann said if the motion for a new trial should be denied, an appeal would be taken to the Massachusetts Supreme Court. Until these proceedings had been completed he advised, no action would be taken in the federal courts.

FRENCH PILOT IS GIVING LEVINE A LOT OF TROUBLE

Big Plane Sequestered As Result of Legal Activities

Paris, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Charles A. Levine's transatlantic monoplane Columbia was practically sequestered this afternoon upon the formal demand of Maurice Drouhin's lawyer when Levine directed a fourth attempt to get possession of the plane's extra motor and cart it off.

Levine sent a truck to LeBoutet Field with men to get the motor and other spare parts twice yesterday, but friends of Drouhin interfered, and this morning the French pilot himself blocked another effort.

When Levine went with a crew to get the motor late this afternoon, M. Barraud, French member of the firm of Beach & Barraud, Drouhin's attorneys stepped in.

AN EARLIER STORY

Paris, Aug. 5.—(AP)—Forecasts of an early hop off of the Bellanca plane Columbia for New York were upset today by failure of Charles A. Levine to keep an appointment to sign a contract with Maurice Drouhin.

The money not having been deposited, the start cannot be made in any circumstances before Tuesday, it is stated.

Drouhin's lawyers said they would give Levine another chance to meet them this afternoon. If this failed it would be considered in Drouhin's camp that all means of inducing Levine to carry out his engagements had been exhausted and the Columbia would probably be seized Monday.

GLENN MASON MEETS TRAGIC DEATH FRIDAY

Sank After Making an Appeal for Aid to His Companion.

Glenn Mason, a youth who has been employed on the Adam Heinzeroth farm near Lee Center this summer, met death in a deep pool in an abandoned quarry southeast of Lee Center at about 8 o'clock Friday evening while bathing with Lyle Simpson of Amboy, his body being recovered a short time after he sank in the pool after an outcry for help.

The two youths went to the pool after their supper to enjoy a swim when suddenly Mason, whose home is believed to have been in Montour, Iowa, sank. Simpson made desperate efforts to find his body, and failing, ran to the garage at Lee Center, where a number of men were collected; and they at once hurried to the pool.

Inquest This Morn.

F. L. Jahn, the Lee Center garage man, dived into the water and soon found the body and brought it to the surface, and for over half an hour efforts to resuscitate the young man through artificial respiration were made. Dr. Sullivan of Amboy arriving in the meantime, and directing the work, which was in vain.

The body was taken to the Frank Vaughan undertaking rooms in Amboy where Coroner F. M. Banker of Franklin Grove conducted an inquest this morning. The fact that Mason sank so suddenly brought a theory that he had been seized with a heart attack or cramps.

The young man, who was about 18 years of age, had but recently returned to Lee Center from a visit with his relatives in Iowa. He was a popular man in the vicinity, taking an active part in social activities, and his tragic death has brought sorrow to many friends in the community.

PRESIDENT WILL HAVE NO TASK IN FINDING NEW JOB

Rapid City, S. D., Aug. 6.—(AP)—Somewhere a new job is "waiting President Coolidge." He hasn't the slightest idea what kind it is and he isn't worrying much.

Someone has suggested to the President that if his statement declaring he did not choose to run for re-election really meant his retirement, he would need to be looking around for something to do after March 4, 1929, and Mr. Coolidge emphasized that that was correct.

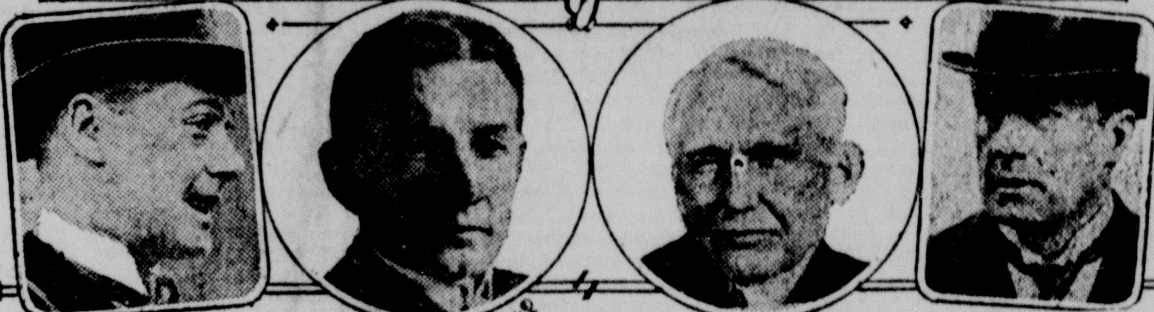

But he has let it be known that work has never found any difficulty in coming his way, and he believes it likely will continue to find him easily after he leaves the White House.

Thus the President has given notice that he has no intention of running again. For further emphasis it has been said at the summer White House that Mr. Coolidge will not call another naval conference because he believes he would be out of office before such a meeting could be convened.

at the Lutheran church, Rev. D. P. Bair officiating, and with burial in Fairmount cemetery.

Mr. Wesner was born in Green Castle, Pa., May 28, 1844, and was married in the east to Miss Mary E. Osbaugh before they came west to this community in 1872. His wife preceded him in death twelve years ago, his immediately survivors being a daughter, Bessie of Polo; two sons, John of Sterling and Harvey of Los Angeles; one brother, Mahlon of Sterling; and three grandchildren.

THREE CARS DAMAGED; THREE OCCUPANTS INJURED IN MISHAP EAST OF DIXON THIS MORNING

Chicago, Moline, La-Salle Cars Meet in Collision

Three automobiles, a Studebaker, a Hupmobile and a Chrysler, were badly damaged and several persons were injured in a collision this forenoon on the Lincoln Highway, one and a half miles east of Dixon. The Studebaker was damaged to the extent of $200, the Chrysler, $150 and the Hupmobile, $50.

The injured were: Mrs. John Olson, 65, of Chicago, who was shocked and badly shaken up.

Mr. Alfred Johnson of Moline, cut with glass, sustaining a severe scalp wound and receiving cuts on the leg and back.

Alfred Johnson, Moline, badly bruised.

All of the injured were taken to the office of Dr. McCoy by Deputy Sheriff Richardson, and were given first aid. The damaged cars were brought to the city by wreckers. The Hupmobile was able to come to Dixon under its own power.

Story of Accident.

State Officer Lenox, who arrived a few moments after the wreck occurred, tells the following story regarding the collision:

A state highway truck filled with sand was going west spreading sand on the highway. The Chrysler, west-bound was close to the truck, but could not pass on account of the Studebaker going east. The Hupmobile, also going west was close behind the Chrysler, and believing the Chrysler was going to pass the truck, kept driving at a good speed, and when the driver saw that the car ahead of his was going to slow down, was unable to stop and hit the Chrysler, pushing the front of the car under the bed of the truck. The collision with the Chrysler knocked the Hupmobile across the highway in the path of the oncoming Studebaker which struck the car and both nosed into the ditch.

The Chrysler was driven by Miss J. H. Palzgraf of Aurora while the occupants of the Hupmobile were Mr. and Mrs. J. Alfred Johnson of Moline. The party in the Studebaker was composed of A. J. Johnson and family of LaSalle and Mrs. John Olson of Chicago. Mr. Johnson is president of the Machinery Manufacturing Co. of LaSalle.

ROCHELLE FARM HAND CRUSHED BY MACHINERY

In Lincoln Hospital in Serious Condition Result of Mishap

Rochelle.—Cooney Stein, well known farmer of this vicinity is in a critical condition today at Lincoln hospital as the result of injuries suffered Thursday when his body was caught between a heavy tractor and grain separator while he was threshing on the Gardner farm east of Rochelle.

Stein and another employe, Herman Tapp, were alone at the machine which they were planning to move to another location. Stein backed the tractor towards the separator while Tapp stood by to "couple" the machine. Instead of stopping when close enough, the tractor shot back with increased speed, catching Stein between it and the separator.

The victim's chest was badly crushed by the force of the impact and knives of the shaft carriers pierced his back, inflicting many deep and painful wounds. Stein was rendered unconscious.

Tapp tried to free Stein but found the undertaking too much for his strength and ran for help. It took the entire crew of five men working in a nearby field to force the two machines apart and draw the farm hand's body from between them.

The injured man was taken to Lincoln hospital, where his condition today was reported as critical.

Stein has lived in this vicinity for a number of years and is well known and popular in farming circles and in Rochelle. He is married and is the father of two young children.

OUTSTANDING PREACHER TO BE HEADLINER AT DIXON'S ANNUAL BIBLE CONFERENCE NEXT WEEK

Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, formerly of London and now of Los Angeles, is today recognized as one of the most outstanding preachers and teachers in the English speaking world. Many years ago, one of the great downtown churches of London, Eng., had fallen upon evil times. A huge church, one of the largest in Great Britain was about to close its doors when the trustees decided to appeal to Dr. Morgan to take the pastorate. He agreed to do so and within six months it was a difficult thing to find standing room. Lines almost a mile long were a regular sight outside Westminster Chapel and the derelict church became a perfect beehive of Christian activity. Today it is one of the most

NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BALTIMORE, SCENES BOMB EXPLOSIONS DURING NIGHT

Heavy Guards Placed Around Public Men and Public Buildings in Large Cities of United States.

(By The Associated Press)

There was a series of bomb explosions in the United States and South America over night. No evidence was made public to show that there was connection between the bombings and the Sacco-Vanzetti case; but in New York, where two subway stations were bombed, officials were quoted as believing Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers responsible.

At Baltimore a bomb was exploded under the porch of Mayor William F. Broening.

In Philadelphia Emmanuel Presbyterian church was badly damaged by a bomb that exploded in the basement.

In Buenos Aires a general strike called to protest in the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, was marked by disorder and the explosion of two bombs.

Communists made a hostile demonstration before the house of American Consul at Lille, France.

At Cambridge, Mass., police were investigating the firing of a fusillade of shots at the court house.

Boston, like New York, was being guarded by extra police details.

New York, Aug. 6.—(AP)

—Maurice D. Seigel, 30-year-old dentist, was held without bail today charged with suspicion of implication in the bombing of the 28th Street station of the I. R. T. subway shortly before midnight.

Assistant District Attorney Ryan said that he had requested that Seigel be held without bail because of his "unusual and suspicious manner" during questioning.

Ryan said Seigel acknowledged he was an anarchist, saying he had come from Russia 14 years ago.

Seigel denied that he had any knowledge of the bombings.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—(AP)

—Threats supposedly by Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers to bomb the Chicago Federal Building led today to the posting of a guard of 23 federal agents on a day and night watch about the building.

They were instructed that if an emergency arose they should shoot first and ask questions afterwards.

Especially attention was paid to the vehicle tunnel under the building and the parcels post department.

The structure was bombed ten years ago, when eight persons were killed and many injured.

New York, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Every subway and elevated station in the city was under police guard today in an attempt to prevent further activities of bombers—believed in some quarters to be Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers—who last night wrecked two subway stations in the Madison Square district, terrorizing thousands and injuring more than a score.

The federal government assigned department of justice agents to assist the police in their search for clues.

The two bombs were exploded almost simultaneously in the station at Broadway and 28th street, near the Flat Iron Building, and the station at 40th avenue and 28th street.

Much Damage Done

Walls were torn away, holes were blown through the sidewalk. Kiosks at the subway entrances were nearly demolished and windows of surrounding buildings were shattered for four stories up.

No train was in either station when the explosion occurred, although in one instance a train was approaching and the brakes were applied so suddenly that dozens of passengers were thrown from their seats.

The only clue was a small iron box smelling of nitroglycerine found in one station.

OLD MASTERS

Moan, moan, ye dying gales!
The saddest of your tales
Is not so sad as life;
Nor have ye e'er began
A theme so wild as man,
Or with such sorrow rife.

Fall, fall, thou withered leaf!
Autumn sears not like grief,
Nor kills such lovely flowers;
More terrible the storm,
More mournful the deform,
When dark misfortune lowers.
—Henry Neale: Moan, Moan, Ye Dying Gales.

TO TAKE EXCURSION TO NIAGARA FALLS

Mrs. Emma Smith and sister, Miss Margaret Sorbe, have gone to Chicago, and will leave that city for an excursion to Niagara Falls, returning Monday evening.

Menus for the Family

BREAKFAST—Grape fruit, crisp broiled bacon, scramble eggs, bran muffins, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Timbales of ham and rice, toasted muffins, fruit salad, coconut crisps, milk, tea.

DINNER—Broiled lamb chops, carrot cups filled with green peas, banana and nut salad, peach short-cake, milk, coffee.

Timbales of ham and rice suggest an attractive way to use up bits of left-over ham. It's often real economy to buy a whole ham and if every bit, even the scraps around the bone can be used, little waste need be calculated.

Timbales of Ham and Rice

One cup finely chopped cold cooked ham, 1-2 cup cold boiled rice, 1-2 cup soft bread crumbs, 2 eggs, 1 cup milk, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon parsley.

Combine bread crumbs with rice. Add milk and let stand fifteen minutes. Beat to make a smooth batter. Add ham, pepper, parsley and eggs well beaten. Mix thoroughly and turn into well buttered ramikins. Bake thirty minutes. Turn out of molds and serve on a hot platter garnished with sprigs of crisp parsley. If ramikins are not at hand custard cups or muffin pans can be used. (Copyright, 1927, NEA Service, Inc.)

Bridge Luncheon Was Charming Event

The 1 o'clock bridge-luncheon at the Dixon Country club Friday, with Miss Frances LeSage as hostess, given in honor of Miss Louise Murphy of this city, who is soon to leave for Europe to attend school, and for Miss Mary Howard of Streator who has been Miss O'Malley's house guest for several weeks, was a most enjoyable affair. There were guests for three tables, pink roses being the lovely decorations.

At bridge Miss Marie LeSage was awarded the favor for high score and Miss Louise Murphy received the favor for second score and she also was presented with a guest favor.

The entire afternoon was one of much pleasure to all present.

The WOMAN'S DAY by ALLENE SUMNER

A picture of Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, First Lady of the U. S. A., and a picture of Queen Mary, First Lady of All the Britains, came to my desk in the same mail.

Our own First Lady is curled up in the grass, legs tucked under her school-girl fashion, wearing a plain little tan dress, and looking as if she is having the time of her life.

All the panoply of quondam surrounds Queen Mary, who is swathed in evident petticoats too numerous to mention, gloved, veiled and hatted, and looking very serious over the business of dedicating the hospital where she stands.

It is difficult to imagine Queen Mary curled up on the grass a La Grace Coolidge, which reminds us that being IT in democracy must be as much superior to being IT in a monarchy as being just a plain citizen is superior—to each side, I suppose.

Or is it? Maybe Grace Coolidge, who can sit on the grass, would love being a queen and wearing a crown, just to see what it's like. Desire for new experiences marks the really intelligent person such as our First Lady.

I Hate 'Em!

The woman opposite me at lunch "bawled out" the waitress for something or other. Sometimes one wonders why some people never learn the most obvious truths, one of them being that the surest sign of inferiority is to flaunt supposed superiority before assumed inferiors. Proving my own inferiority, it was all I could do to keep from hurling my glass of water in the face of the fuser as her tirade against the girl continued.

John D. Keeps Dime

My new black velvet hat is off to the little 7-year-old who refused John D.'s dime. I've been waiting for someone to say "no, thank you" to John D. for a long time. As usual, it remained for a child to do so. Hats off, too, to little Miss Paddie Randall's parents, who have taught her not to accept money. More children need similar coaching.

The Shingle Cure.

The Roberts Semple are getting on my nerves. There seems to be an epidemic of these young lecturers still damp from the egg who, having been supported by parents in good homes all their lives, never have really met life at all, but are about telling the rest of us how to be good. I ache to have them over my knee, myself supplied with some good, firm shingles! They get up in a pulpit, boast that they never have chewed gum or attended a movie or a dance, and proceed to regulate the lives of us who think we do know a little about living instead of boasting the contrary.

HAVE BEEN GUESTS AT JOHNSON AND NEIGHBOUR HOMES

Wallace McGinnis of Wichita, Kansas, and son Bert of Goodwell, Okla., registrar of the state college at that place, who have been visiting in Dixon with their cousins, Mrs. S. E. Johnson and Prof. and Mrs. L. B. Neighbour, left for Aurora, Ill., where they will visit relatives and friends.

Dr. Burr Writes About "Old Masters"

Editor—I read with pleasure your daily selections of poetry under the caption "Old Masters." In your issue yesterday (Thursday, Aug. 4) the first verse of that delightful poem "Careless Content" was printed and attributed to John Byron. Evidently this was a misprint. The entire poem is to be found in Chamber's Cyclopaedia of English Literature Vol. 4, pg. 52 and was composed by John Byron (1691-1763) of Manchester, England. His occasional poems were very popular in his day.

In today's issue appears a verse of a "Song to the Oak" by Henry Fothergill Chorley. No mention of him as a writer of poetry is found in the encyclopaedia. His fame rests upon his reputation as a musical critic. He wrote two or three novels and dramas which were failures.

This leads me to suggest that a few lines of information about the author of these selected verses would very much add to the interest concerning "Old Masters." For example, under this heading appeared last week a poem by Sir Henry Wotton, an English diplomat and poet (1568-1639). It would interest our Isaac Walton friends to know that their patron saint was devotedly attached to this noted romantic character and wrote a biography of him. He was secretary to the Earl of Essex, the paramour of "Good Queen Bess" at the time she slapped his face in a lover's quarrel and told him he "could go hang." Wotton fled to Florence, Italy in time to escape the fate of the unfortunate courtier, his master, whom the queen ordered executed in the Tower of London on a charge of sedition. Later he was sent secretly by the Duke of Tuscany to warn King James VI of Scotland of a plot to take his life. When this same prince became James I of England he rewarded Wotton by knighting him and sending him as ambassador in 1604 to the Republic of Venice. As he passed through Augsburg on his way he wrote in Latin in an album that famous witticism "An ambassador is a good man, sent to be neglected for the good of his country," for which he was compelled to make humble apology to his offended King. His poem "The Character of a Happy Life" is considered one of the finest lyrics in the English language.

SIMPLE REMEDIES FOR FOREHEAD CREASES
By MINE, Anne Gerarde
For NEA Service

Disfiguring creases across the forehead indicate worry, weak eyes, or the bad habit of talking too much with your eyebrows.

Try to eliminate the causes. Two exercises will do much to eliminate these creases.

First, dip the first two fingers of both hands in skin food and by a rotating motion loosen the skin thoroughly over the whole forehead. Keep your thumbs against temples for support.

Second, now iron out the wrinkles in the following manner: Beginning at the center of forehead, press your fingers tight and draw them slowly but very firmly out towards your temples. Lift fingers and repeat until you are tired.

PREPARE NEW ENGLAND SPICED CURRANTS.

By NEA Service

As a child Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, Congresswoman from the 5th Massachusetts district, helped her grandmother with her preserving. Her own mother preferred that her little daughter not learn to cook, but her grandmother in Maine believed that every girl's education should include a course in household arts.

The grandmother's favorite recipes included one for spiced currants. "It's an old favorite," says Mrs. Rogers, "of all New England housewives." Here it is:
7 pounds of currants.
5 pounds of sugar.
3 tablespoons of cinnamon.
3 tablespoons of cloves
1 pint of vinegar.

"Pick over the currants," said Mrs. Rogers, "wash, drain and remove the stems. Put in a preserving kettle, add the sugar, vinegar and spices tied in a piece of muslin. Heat to the boiling point and cook slowly one and one-half hours."

Strawberry Preserves.

Despite her prejudice against her child learning to cook Mrs. Nourse herself was a famous cook. Her best beloved recipe was one for strawberry preserves, gathered from Mrs. Lincoln's Boston Cook Book, an old standard.

"Measure a bowl of berries," said Mrs. Rogers, "and the same quantity of sugar. Put in a preserving kettle, over night, a layer of berries and then a layer of sugar. In the morning cook slowly without stirring until the liquid is clear and the fruit soft. Skin thoroughly before putting in jars.

"These were the best strawberry preserves I ever tasted. My mother, knowing my own sweet tooth, added more sugar. But that depends, of course, upon the taste for whom the sweets are intended."

Mrs. Lee Eastman not being present, there was no treasurer's report given. Several motions were made and carried, and plans for a food sale and bazaar were made. Mrs. Westlund gave a very interesting report on her trip through Canada and Ohio. She visited her son George in Ohio. Two new members, Mrs. Margaret Burrs and Mrs. Margaret E. Starr were enrolled at this meeting. The next meeting will be held the first Friday in September. The annual state picnic will be held in Pontiac, Aug. 18. All members of the local chapter are asked to attend, if possible.

Morris-Mumma Wedding Celebrated

A very impressive wedding ceremony took place at high noon Saturday, July 30, when Miss Gladys Mumma of Dixon and George Morris, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Morris, also of Dixon, were united in marriage.

Rev. A. R. Bickenbach officiated at his home in Oregon, and the fact that Mr. Morris' father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Morris, were united in marriage by Rev. Bickenbach made the ceremony the more impressive.

Miss Dorothy Himes of Oregon, formerly of Dixon, and Roderick Ware of Dixon attended the bridal couple as their vows were pledged.

The bride was lovely in a blue georgette dress with hat and other accessories en costume.

Miss Himes was charming in a pale green georgette dress with hat and slippers harmonizing.

After the ceremony, a tempting luncheon was served at the Sinissippi Cafe, and the four young people left on a motor trip to the Wisconsin Dells and other points of interest in Wisconsin.

The young people have returned from a brief wedding trip and are now at home on a farm near Dixon.

The bride, a most attractive young woman, attended Dixon High School a few years ago, and Mr. Morris is a graduate of Dixon High School and spent a year at the University of Illinois.

They are both charming young people and have a host of friends who wish them much happiness.

OBLIGATION OF CASTLE.

We are inclined to drift toward the English theory of care for those of low financial estate, with the exception of a doler for the unemployed. We have not yet come to that, but we may. We drift toward these things although we do not stand upon the same fundamentals. This was pointed out by the Washington correspondent of the Kansas City Star, who was writing from abroad.

"You find an amazing degree of state socialism set up here in England—set up because the caste system on which the nation is built demands that the state take care of its poor," he says. "They are born into caste. They go through life with it. They have no expectation or ambition to rise above it. And when they get old, the state must assist in their care by age pensions until they die.

"Over home the theory is that everybody shall have his chance to rise, to save, to be in position to take care of himself and his own when he grows old.

"I do not believe American labor, imperfectly as our system works, would swap for a minute the open door to high standard of living afforded them, for all the social legislation Britain has on her statute books. If the average man just came over and saw the hopeless, rigid class or caste system and the mere drab existence that is eked out that makes necessary such state aid as old age and health pensions and employment insurance or the dole, he would answer, No."

Care of the destitute is one of the public services in this country. That is fundamental. From that basis charities of various kinds range upward. Our pensions are service pensions, whether from public or private sources. Our tendency has been not to encourage shiftless living or spendthrift qualities by assurances that all come out equal in the end. Always there is the fundamental principle of care for the destitute, but it has been our theory that destitution should not be encouraged.

In England what one is born one lives and dies and English laws have recognized that condition.

DISCOVERING FLAPPER CONSCIENCES.

You can take the declaration that Chicago beach police will this summer impose no restrictions on flapper bathing costumes in any one of several ways. Either the flapper of Chicago has reformed, or else the Chicago authorities have given up hope of reforming her. Be this as it may, Chicago will use no measuring sticks this summer, nor try to enforce regulations that the feminine bathing costumes must come so many inches up or so many inches down, depending on the starting point. The naive police officer's quaint declaration that the censorship will be left entirely to the consciences of the flappers will make many reformers wonder if the uncensored costumes will reveal consciences which the doubters have always declared non-existent.

CUT PRICE DIPLOMACY.

When President Roosevelt wanted to win the good will of the world, he sent a United States fleet around the globe, touching all important ports and heart strings.

It was a spectacular show, but the newer way seems much less expensive. Take the trips of the round-the-world flyers, the round-South America flyers and, of course, Lindbergh and Chamberlin.

With this in mind, why couldn't a party consisting of Mary Pickford, General Pershing, Babe Ruth, Al Smith, Red Grange, Helen Wills, Elsie Janis, Peggy Joyce, John D. Rockefeller, the Mayor of Beverly Hills, Secretary Kellogg, Jackie Coogan and a few of the other idols be organized to fly around and bring this diplomatic applause to a good substantial jell?

BROADCASTERS CROWD THE ROPES.

The national radio commission confesses its inability to keep the broadcasters back of the ropes. They have been given their places, but many have failed to keep them. Commissioner Bellows says that on August 1 they were warned and on August 1, if they have not restrained their ambitions, they will be separated from the public. Vacant places will not be filled and listeners will be given added pleasures thereby.

THE ANYMITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNICK

It surely was a funny scene to watch the little submarine. The Tinies climbed around its sides, and scrambled up on top. Said Scouty, "We are soaking wet, but we are glad we're safe, you bet! We thought most any minute that our Taffy boat would drop."

And then they saw the taffy boat, which for a long time stayed afloat, just sort of drift right out of sight amid the whipped cream sea. It made the whole bunch feel real bad. "Cause quite a dandy trip they'd had. Then Clowny said, 'Oh, let's not cry. You're as can be.'"

"You're right," the queer sub captain cried. "The cheerful lady, and come inside. I'll let you hang your wet clothes up so they can quickly dry." And, in the sub the whole bunch went, and 'bout an hour or so was spent in drying clothes. The Tinies sat and watched them with a sigh.

They turned them 'round and 'round, and then, when all the bunch were dressed again, the captain served some bread and milk. Oh, gee, it tasted good. "That's good for any little man," the captain said. "Eat all you can." And that's just what the Tinies did because they knew they should.

When they had finished with their meal, wee Carpy said, "I surely feel like running 'round and playing tag. I think that would be grand. 'All right, my son," the captain cried. "We soon will end this little ride. If you will just be patient, I will take you up on land."

Wee Scouty's knowledge was real keen. Said he, "How can a submarine go up on land? That isn't what a submarine is for." But then they felt a bump. They all peeked out. It made them jump, for, through the window they could see that they were up on shore.

An Ex-Buck PRIVATE goes back to FRANCE

German decorations, so prevalent in the occupied areas of France during the war, are fast disappearing. From one cause or another, using a good brand of white paint for backgrounds and an excellent brand of black paint for letters, the invaders of France placed their identifying marks in the villages. But not always permanently.

As in Reville—which is east of the Meuse river. There the name of the town was painted in huge black letters on a white background on the side wall of the village wash-house. Leon Gaspard watched the German artists work—he had refused to leave when the armies marched in. For four years he looked at that sign every day from the windows of his little stone house across the road. And every day he swore himself a little oath under his breath that, if the chance ever came, he would—

The chance came. Some gentlemen from the 79th American division happened along and the Germans did a "trous mité." And Leon Gaspard, backed by his four-year-old intention, got out his aid. It took him almost an entire day to scrape that sign from the wash-house. But he scraped it off—or most of it. And when he had finished he stepped back to survey his work with a sigh of deep satisfaction.

Down in St. Benoit in the St. Mihiel sector there's a German sign on a barn—"Auto-Standardplatz." In Beney there's a sign: "Stockrad Strasse"; in Thiaucourt another with an arrow pointing in the direction of "Euregeln." In the Argonne Forest there are a few wooden direction signs. There are some "Yeeboed" signs in the church at Exermont.

But most of the decorations left by the Germans have been erased entirely, or else they have been

SAINT and SINNER

Faith woke the next morning with the blessed feeling of "God's in the heaven; all's right with the world." And Hob was especially love-like. He rose early, prepared a rose-scented bath for her, and carried her to it, swung high in his arms. And while she bathed he went into the little scum of back yard and picked a bunch of flamboyant nasturtiums, which she later found in a tumbler of water before her breakfast plate. And he marched her to the door with him, his arm close about her shoulders, when he was ready to leave for the office. A curt, employer-like command sent Cherry, rather sulkily, to the car parked in the driveway.

"Here's a check for a hundred, sweet," Bob told Faith in a low voice, as he tucked a folded bit of paper into her hand. "Buy yourself that dress I was telling you about for the Fruit party. And you'd better get yourself a dress-up hat to go with it. If that's not enough, don't skimp. I'll give you more at lunch today."

"I'm lurching with you?" Faith's voice trembled with happiness. "Of course you are! You just try to stand me up!" Bob gibed, stooping to kiss her—a hard, long kiss, not the quick, husbandly peck that his good-bye sometimes was.

"Ain't he the sweetest thing?" Mrs. Lundy applauded. Faith, smiling and flushing in her happiness, agreed that he was. She had not realized, until she was actually in the shopping district, how closely she had stayed at home, how "out of things" she had let herself be since her marriage. It was a sheer delight to sit like a young queen—or like a beloved wife with a generous husband—while attentive salesgirls brought lovely, misty dresses for her approval. And it was Bob's choice that she bought after all—a dream of a chiffon frock—a vivid blending of orange and crimson that brought out the warmest tints in her creamy skin and the coppery glints in her brown hair. In the nasturtium dress she looked very tall and very slender, like a proud princess.

She was fortunate in finding a picture hat that matched the deeper nasturtium shade to perfection. She had never owned so becoming a hat or so perfect a dress, and her almost ecstatic happiness over her purchases shone in her eyes, made even her skin luminous, when she arrived at Bob's offices at one o'clock. She had expected Bob to retain his livery-like mood all morning. But it was a different Bob who greeted her hastily, then asked her to wait until he was free. Cherry came tripping out of his private office, a little frown of businesslike concentration between her silken, copper-colored eyebrows, her note book in her hand.

"Oh, hello, Faith!" she greeted her sister abstractedly. "Oh, Bob," she turned to call back into the private office. "Ask Mr. Apperson whether he wants this estimate figured on both bungalows or just the one with the tile roof. We're awfully busy today," she added briskly to Faith. "I hope you won't mind waiting a few minutes."

Faith said nothing. The busy clicking of Cherry's typewriter keys was like a devil's tattoo upon her heart.

Ray Lahman of Mt. Vernon, Iowa, is visiting at the home of his sisters, Miss Clara Lahman and Mrs. Elizabeth Durkes.

The ringing of the fire bell at 3 o'clock this morning brought forth a large crowd of people asking where the fire was. It proved to be the residence of Mrs. M. V. Peterman.

While the firemen and others worked hard they were unable to save the house from being a wreck. Those who certainly are entitled to much credit for even keeping the fire under control as they did. The origin of the fire is supposed to have been caused by the explosion of the gasoline tank in an automobile in the garage which had been recently built on the north side of the house.

Mr. and Mrs. George Jeanguinot occupied the lower floor and Mrs. Peterman the upper floor. Mrs. Jeanguinot was visiting in St. Louis. It was with great difficulty that Mr. Jeanguinot and Mrs. Peterman escaped with their lives, but just a small portion of furniture was saved. Both parties left the house with only their night clothes, but through the kindness of friends were both clad this morning.

Much real sympathy is being extended to Mrs. Peterman in the loss of her lovely home, which had just been remodeled that it might be more convenient for two families.

IN MEMORIAM

In the death of F. D. Lahman on August 1, Franklin Grove has lost one of its most outstanding citizens.

A man who during a life time of seventy years contributed largely to the community and its welfare.

Born November 13, 1856, the eldest child of Rev. Joseph C. and Lorenza Diehl Lahman, he was named after the famous pathfinder, John C. Fremont, who that year was the first presidential candidate of the newly organized republican party.

His early boyhood was spent at a spot which always remained dear to him—the Old Mill on Franklin creek, near the Sproul schoolhouse, whence in 1864 his father moved to the Christian Lahman homestead just west of Franklin Grove. Like many boys of his time, his schooling was interrupted at certain seasons by the need of helping with the farm work.

Later he attended Mount Morris college and North-Western (now North Central) College at Naperville.

From early manhood Mr. Lahman lived on the farm adjoining the east limits of the village, to which he applied the most scientific methods of farming, so that it became known as one of the most productive farms in Lee county. To him the soil was a living thing, the great outdoors God's workshop, and in this feeling he brought to his calling as a farmer a sense of partnership with the Divine.

To this farm home, on March 1, 1894, he brought as his wife Minnie Pollock of Ashton, Illinois, who until his death was his faithful co-worker.

Besides her he leaves to mourn his passing an only child, Carroll P. Lahman, instructor at the Western State Teachers' College, Kalamazoo, Michigan, a year old baby granddaughter in whom his heart delighted, and two brothers, Charles of Tulsa, Oklahoma, and Roscoe of Stillwater, Oklahoma.

Three sisters and two brothers preceded him in death: Grace, Mrs. Florence Grim, Mrs. Ella Brackett, Frank, and Oliver, the last named passing away at Franklin Grove only April 25 of this year.

Well read, keenly interested in current affairs, positive in his views, and physically alert until the fatal stroke of paralysis on June 3, Freeman Lahman was a powerful influence for good in his community for many years.

His name always stood early in the list of supporters of all worthwhile civic enterprises; his active aid and financial assistance were assured for projects designed to promote community and general welfare.

He served as a member of the school board for nine years. For a long period he was president of the Farmers Elevator, The Farm Bureau had in him an active and enthusiastic member.

It was he who brought to Franklin Grove its first chautauqua, then known as the Lincoln Temperance Chautauqua. At the time of his death he was vice president of the Citizens State Bank of Franklin Grove.

And his interests were not confined to his home community, for many were the organizations and institutions that were the recipients of his largesse. But though his generous nature met with sympathy appeals that looked to the constructive betterment of society, he was vigorously and fearlessly opposed to such forces as he believed were harmful.

One of the greatest satisfactions of his life was the ushering in of national prohibition. To this "communion devoutly to be hoped" he gave unstintingly of time and money.

It was his conviction that real prohibition could be secured only through definite political party action, and hence for forty years he was an active third party Prohibitionist.

Believing that no vote is ever lost if cast for principle, he served for years as county chairman as a member of the prohibition state central committee. More than once his name appeared as candidate for presidential elector, and twice he was a delegate to national conventions.

In 1908 he was nominated by the Prohibition party for state senator from the thirty-fifth senatorial district and as the only "dry" candidate made a phenomenal campaign over the entire district. If it had not been the year of a presidential election, he might well have been elected. As it was, he polled a tremendous vote—a tribute to the cause and the man.

At the time of his death, though disappointed at the partial non-enforcement of prohibition, he was as firm a believer in the principle as ever. His life stands as a challenge to those who knew him to carry on the great crusade "which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced."

This life, filled with kindly deeds and rich friendships as it was, was fully rounded out only a few months before its close. Under the preaching of the Reverend A. E. Thomas of the Presbyterian church, on his thirty-third wedding anniversary he made public confession of the Christian faith he had so long believed and practiced and was received into the church on Easter Sunday.

"His life was gentle, and the elements so mixed in him, that Nature might stand up."

And say to all the world, "This was a man."

Funeral services were held in the Presbyterian church Wednesday afternoon, with Rev. R. L. McWorter of Decatur, former pastor and very close friend of the deceased, in charge. Symbolic of the broad sympathies of the man in whose memory they were held, the services were shared in by representatives of all the Franklin Grove churches. Mrs. George Emmert of Chicago, former organist of the Presbyterian church presided at the pipe organ. Rev. L. V. Stiller, pastor of the Methodist church, sang "I Journey Toward the City" and a male quartet from the Brethren church, composed of O. D. Ira and Earl Buck and Jay Miller, sang "That Beautiful Land."

Palbearers were Frank Kesselring, Willis Reigle, William Miller, C. E. Weybright, Elmer Cline, R. C. Gross. Interment was made in the Franklin cemetery.

OBITUARY

Florence Edna, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Gaffin, was born June 27, 1877, near Leaf River, Ill., and died July 25, 1927, at her home near Franklin Grove.

She was united in marriage to Frank Wingert. To this union were born four daughters; Nellie, who resides at home, Mrs. Earl Arnold of Oregon, Ill.; Mrs. Montelle Stephens of Glenn Ellyn, Ill. and Bernice, who preceded her mother in death.

Besides her husband and three daughters, she leaves her aged parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Gaffin of Storm Lake, Iowa, one brother, C. R. Gaffin, of Storm Lake; and one sister Mrs. J. M. Price of Oregon; also three grandchildren, whom she enjoyed so much.

She graduated from Leaf River high school, afterward attending Mr. Morris College and later teaching in the rural schools of Ogle County. At the age of eighteen she accepted Christ as her savior and united with the Church of the Brethren and was faithful to the teachings of her Lord and to the high and holy purpose of the church.

In disposition she was cheerful and happy and always glad to help others. She bore her affliction bravely and with very little complaint. She was actively engaged in church work, teaching in the Sunday school for more than 20 years, and was acting president of the Aid Society at the time of her death.

Funeral services were held in the Church of the Brethren Thursday afternoon, being conducted by Rev. O. D. Buck assisted by Rev. C. W. Lahman. Interment was made in the Emmert cemetery west of town.

No trembling sad farewell
From her quivering lips was heard:
So softly she crossed, the quiet stream
Was not by a ripple stirred.
So low was her Master's call
That it did not reach our ears:
But she heard the sound; her quick response
Had never a note of fear.
Weep not, as her tolls are o'er,
So our race may soon be won.
Lo, with sandaled feet and staff in hand
Our work for the Lord must be done.

When a Man Loves

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
John Barrymore in "WHEN A MAN LOVES" is a Warner Bros. Production of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescaut, beautiful orphan, whose rascally brother, realizing her scoldish value, bargains her to Raviro, rich, connaisseur of women. Fabien, saves her and carries her off to Paris, where they live happily together. Manon's brother steals her for Raviro; she escapes, and searches vainly for Fabien. Circumstances force her to surrender to Raviro. Later, hearing she frequents a gambling place, Fabien goes there, reviles her and insults Raviro.

CHAPTER XII—Continued

The Comte had long since cultivated the habit of suppressing his anger and saving his energies for pleasure rather than for combat. It was more gratifying. "I see that Monsieur is not even man enough to defend his lady! I bid you both good-bye." With a final significant look at Manon, Fabien bowed low and approached the stairs with a deadly calm that struck terror to Manon's numbed heart.

The people watched his departure with breathless silence and not until the massive doors had closed behind him did the tension relax. Then everyone began talking at once. "What a night—What a situation. Now, Manon could not hold her head so high in that sweet, innocent way of hers. Now the men could not refer to her as such a paragon of all that a woman should be." Thus the women's tongues rattled on.

As for the men: some were decently sorry about the whole wretched affair, while others were encouraged to think that, now, they too might have a chance with Manon. They had thought her different, apparently she was not. The Comte had never experienced such annoyance. Trembling with resentment, one could hardly call it by a stronger name, he guided Manon from the room. In a few short moments the pomp and splendor of their arrival had vanished revealing, not the idol of Paris with her wealthy and polished escort but, two ordinary people stripped of all glamor and exposed to their friends and enemies as a common woman and a cowardly man.

"Your son is not lost to you, Sir."

Nana's laugh of deep, amused and satisfied revenge was the last sound Manon heard as the great doors closed behind them.

After leaving the gambling room, Fabien calmly walked outside of the building and with studied deliberation tipped the doorman. He overcame the desire to collapse by tensing every muscle and forcing his legs to move.

Faithful Tiberge emerged from the shadows where he had been waiting ever since Fabien entered the Club. He knew that his friend would be disillusioned and greatly in need of a guiding hand before the night was over, and he had appointed himself for the task, knowing that it would be both difficult and thankless.

Sensing Fabien's anguish, Tiberge followed and gripped him tenderly by the shoulder. At the touch of a comforting hand Fabien's control gave way. All of his pent up emotions broke loose and for a moment he rested against Tiberge, taking all the support that was offered.

"You were right," said Fabien simply. It was a tortured admission that meant the end of all earthly happiness.

"No wonder he looks crucified!" thought Tiberge. Although he had never experienced Fabien's emotions or known a woman's love, he understood the pangs of sorrow and suffering and knew the welcome comfort that comes from silent sympathy.

The two men went down the street, arm in arm, thinking—each one in his own way but neither saying a word.

It was dawn before they turned in at Tiberge's lodgings to discuss the future.

CHAPTER XIII

In the south of France was, and probably still is, the great Chateau Des Grioux where Fabien spent his early youth as the favored son of devoted parents.

It was a rather austere and well ordered home radiating dignity and supreme respectability. From the time that Fabien was a boy soloist in the church choir it was planned that he should some day become a Priest. Consequently, it is easy to picture the sorrow and disgrace that descended upon his Mother and Father and brothers when word came that Fabien had forsaken his vows to live a life of shame with some unknown girl in Paris.

Tiberge was a life long friend of the family and went to them with the hope of assuaging their grief. "Your son is not lost to you, Sir," he said. "Perhaps even now he repents of his boyish folly." "Every addition I had was centered on him," tonelessly replied the grief stricken father. "He has betrayed my faith and broken his mother's heart."

For a moment Tiberge stood with bowed head, then with face alight he continued, "But his natural piety will outlast this whim of the senses."

"I wonder—I wonder!" reflected the Father.

"It is true, sir. You need worry no more about Fabien. He has at last given up all thought of Manon, and is entering St. Sulpice to resume his studies for the Priesthood."

A wonderful sense of peace and relief spread over the fine old gentleman's face. "Thank God," he said fervently. "When you return take him our love, our blessings and our forgiveness."

When Tiberge delivered this message, the repentant son was deeply grateful and it lifted a great burden from his soul. He dearly loved his family and now that the harrowing incidents of the past few months were over, it was difficult to understand how he had been so able to completely forget and neglect them.

However, Fabien's resolve to re-enter St. Sulpice came only after a tremendous struggle to forget the Manon he loved and the perfidious woman he thought she had become. In the end it was Tiberge who persuaded him to renounce the pleasures of the world and enter into holy orders. The plan also suited Fabien's changed outlook on life. He imagined himself entirely safe from the dangers of love and honestly believed he had reached the stage in life where prayerful meditation was worth more than the gratification of his earthly appetites, even those he had enjoyed with Manon.

Fabien was determined to lead a holy and christian life with the hours so divided between study and religion that there would be no leisure for the perilous pleasures of love. He was convinced that he had lost all esteem for Manon. Yet her image, with its exquisite features, was engraved on his very heart's core and would always remain uneffaced. He was, also, positive that no other woman could tempt him because he detested them as a class and as individuals he did not care to even converse with another.

For nearly a year now, Fabien had been devoting himself to study. His peace of mind was restored. His past contact with love enabled him to understand many passages in the classics which had been previously obscure, and he looked upon the world with new eyes—eyes that saw in the beautiful influence of the Church another life extending into the years ahead. In this other life the memory of Manon would be consigned to eternal oblivion.

The time was drawing near for Fabien to take his public examinations in theology, and at such events it was customary for the names of students to be posted so that the public could attend if they were interested.

It happened that Manon saw Fabien's name in this connection and lost no time in availing herself of a opportunity to attract him. Ladies were forced to sit in special seats behind a screen so that Fabien had no idea of her presence. Every day for a whole week she was there, watching and waiting, longing for a chance to see and speak with him privately. The examinations ended and Manon's wish remained ungratified. She knew that Fabien would take his final vows on the following day, and as her whole future happiness depended upon seeing him before that time she determined to throw convention to the winds and seek him out at the Church. Her love was not dead, in fact it had matured until it was the only vital thing in her life.

Springfield, Mo.—The Rev. M. E. Schriener, local pastor, believes in "pre-war" prices for getting married, and has set about correcting the alleged high cost of marriages here.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JERRY MACKLYN, advertising manager for the Peach Bloom Cosmetics Co., proposes to change JERRY CAMERON, his plain, old-fashioned secretary, into a beauty and to photograph her in each stage of the change. At first Vera indignantly refuses, but that same day when she sees and falls hopelessly in love with a man she knows called SCHUYLER, she reconsiders.

She hears he is going to take Minnetonka in June, and as she goes back to Jerry with her decision, she tells herself she will undergo anything to be beautiful by June. Because of Vera's green eyes, Jerry is reminded of an un-captured Sunday supplement picture of a handsome woman, and he asks the beauty specialist to refashion Vera, using the picture as a model. The picture was in his VAN when he took the job and he supposed it to be of an actress. Vera is astonishingly beautiful after the transformation.

When she begs Jerry not to use her picture in the advertisement, he refuses unless she will give up her trip. When she leaves, he gives her an envelope which she is to open only if she finds herself in a "jam." At the hotel she clerk and management become deferential, offering to change her room and sending a maid up for her use.

In the dining room she sees the man she has come all the way to meet. When she sees him, he comes to her table and asks if she does not remember that they met in Peoria five years ago. She tells him he is mistaken and he leaves in confusion. After dinner, a Mr. and Mrs. Bannister approach Vera and Mrs. Bannister gives her the hotel gossip, including the fact that Schuyler Smythe and VERA FODICK are probably engaged. She asks Vera to join a swimming party. Mrs. Bannister's ale is deferential, and Vera begins to wonder who they think she is.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XV

WHEN VEE-VEE returned to her room for an hour's rest before dressing for the swimming party which the lively Mrs. Bannister had arranged, she found a great basket of yellow roses on her desk. Her first thought was that Jerry had sent them from New York the night before, after leaving the station, but when she lifted the card attached to the green wicker basket she read:

"With the compliments of the management of the Minnetonka Hotel."

While she was wondering whether the Minnetonka extended the same courtesy to all its arriving guests, there came a knock on the door. She opened to a large, florid, semi-bald man who bowed and beamed:

"I am Mr. Thurston, the manager, Miss—er—Cameron," he told her.

VEE-VEE had a hysterical desire to laugh and to tell him, "My name is not Miss Er Cameron; it is Miss Vera Cameron," but she controlled the impulse, merely nodding gravely.

"In the first place, Miss—er—Cameron, I'd like to assure you that we are delighted to have you, highly honored in fact," the big man began awkwardly.

"Thank you," VEE-VEE smiled, the dimple in the corner of her mouth flashing at him. "I have just been admiring the roses you sent. It is very kind of you."

"Grown in our own conservatories," Mr. Thurston beamed. "Now, Miss—er—Cameron, the management would like to put a suite at your disposal, something more in keeping with your—er—standard of living, if you don't mind my saying so—" bag and went to her desk to write a brief note to both her Aunt Flora and Jerry Macklyn.

She wrote a far longer letter to Jerry than she had intended, a gay, whimsical letter in which she described the hotel, its beautiful setting beside the lake, a few of her fellow guests, and her own appearance among them.

"Thank you," VEE-VEE repeated, more firmly. "I am very comfortable here."

When he had gone, Vera leaned weakly against the foot of her bed and groaned aloud: "Well, I wish I understood perfectly! What the devil is it all about?"

Again she remembered the letter which Jerry Macklyn had broken traffic laws to get to her before her train left. What was it he had said?—"You're not to open it unless you find yourself in a jam."

She opened her envelope handbag and drew out the letter, weighed it in her hands thoughtfully. It was quite bulky. She was about to tear it open when a curious hesitancy stayed her fingers. After all, she was

RICKARD STATES NOTHING WILL BE IN WAY OF FIGHT

Unperturbed by Threat of Injunction, Etc.
Continues Plans

Chicago, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Threats, which Tex Rickard has learned to accept as inevitable whenever he promotes a heavyweight championship fight, again are making themselves evident in the preliminaries for the Tunney-Dempsey engagement Sept. 22.

Not the least is the announcement of B. C. Clements, Chicago boxing promoter who never has promoted a fight, that he will seek an injunction to prevent the bout on the same grounds that resulted last year in Rickard forsaking Chicago and taking the first Dempsey-Tunney bout to Philadelphia.

Clements claims he had a contract with Dempsey to fight Willis last year before fighting anyone else and that he violated the contract by fighting Tunney and will continue to violate it if he fights Tunney again.

Rickard, unperturbed, said nothing can stop the fight.

The Chicago Tribune said today that Dempsey had about made up his mind to choose the Deering Estate near Antioch, as the site for his training quarters. It is 68 miles from Chicago.

A cart-wheel of special trains will stream into Chicago for the fight, railroad officials have indicated in announcing plans to accommodate visitors.

The various roads are anticipating an extra business of about a half million dollars.

Clements claims he had a contract with Dempsey to fight Willis last year before fighting anyone else and that he violated the contract by fighting Tunney and will continue to violate it if he fights Tunney again.

Rickard, unperturbed, said nothing can stop the fight.

The Chicago Tribune said today that Dempsey had about made up his mind to choose the Deering Estate near Antioch, as the site for his training quarters. It is 68 miles from Chicago.

A cart-wheel of special trains will stream into Chicago for the fight, railroad officials have indicated in announcing plans to accommodate visitors.

The various roads are anticipating an extra business of about a half million dollars.

The Primrose Path

Youth is the time the mind lays out its primrose pathways. They are always just ahead.

In school we look up the road a few years and see ourselves in college. When we get there—if we do—we again look up the road and see ourselves in a profession or business.

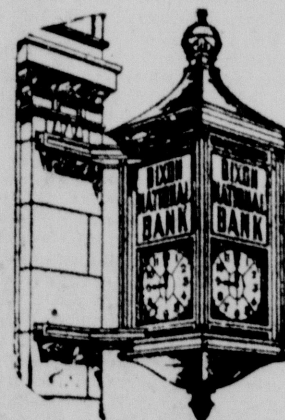

All of that may be just idle dreaming or it may be realized by Faith and determination.

The secret of life is to pull these dream places down out of the clouds and get them firmly fixed in the consciousness.
